ROME, Dec. 5.—Sensational charges that severe repressive measures aimed at the destruction of the Italian population of Tunis were prepared by French authorities in the event of war during the Czech crisis, were made in Regime Fascista today. The newspaper is published by Robert Farinacci, former Fascist party secretary.

Farinacci charged that Tunisian officials prepared concentration camps under the guns of French fortresses and to which Italians would be herded and held as hostages. France has built powerful defenses on the Tunisian-Libyan frontier, and made vast preparations.

New Congress Likely To Cut Relief Appropriations

By William S. Neal

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(INS)—The new Congress is likely to cut relief appropriations in an effort to shift part of the burden back to the States. Rep. Clifton A. Woodrum (D) of Virginia, who piloted the last relief bills in the House last year, predicted today.

Conceding that the reductions may be gradual, Woodrum nevertheless asserted that more members of Congress are coming to believe that the Federal Government must step out of the relief picture.

Woodrum, one of the "big three" leaders of the House Appropriations Committee, started first congressional work today on appropriations as he summoned into session the subcommittee on the big independent offices supply bill.

The measure, which last year embraced more than $4,000,000,000 in appropriations, carries funds for TVA, independent agencies, Social Security and other important branches of the government. Purely relief appropriations are handled separately.

"I think undoubtedly there will be a cut in relief expenditures in the next Congress," said Woodrum. "The States must assume a greater part of the cost. The business pick-up should make it possible to materially cut relief expenditures in spite of stiff opposition."

"Of course, no one wants to cause hardship. It is doubtful if relief outlays can be cut much in the winter, but they can in the spring. If the business pick-up is genuine, they should be reduced."

Bucks County Schoolmen To Attend Phila. Meeting

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 5.—Morrisville and other Bucks County schoolmen will attend a meeting of the South-eastern Convention District of the P. S. E. A. in Mitten Hall, Temple University, Philadelphia, Tuesday night at 7:45 o'clock, when Dr. George E. Riegner, well-known authority on international affairs, who has just returned to America, will speak on "After Munich."

Colonel John Thomas Taylor, director of national legislative commission of the American Legion, will speak on "The Defense of Democracy," and Mrs. Walter Craig, of the Philadelphia Citizens' Emergency Council, will talk on "Pennsylvania Faces New School Problems."

Charles H. Boehm, of this place, assistant county superintendent of public schools, is president of the group.

ADVERTISING DEADLINE EFFECTIVE DECEMBER 15

Display advertising copy for insertion in the Courier must be at the Courier office not later than 12 o'clock noon two days previous to day on which the advertising is to appear.

This rule is made necessary in order to give the mechanical department ample time in which to set the ad and properly illustrate it. It is hoped that advertisers will co-operate and make reservations for space desired and furnish their copy on time.

Copy will not be accepted after the expiration of the deadline announced above.

"Traveling Gavel" For Women's Unit

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 5.—At a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Capitol View Fire Company on Monday evening, the "Traveling Gavel" will be presented to the local group by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Trevoire Fire Company. An invitation has been extended to several auxiliaries to attend.

There will be entertainment and refreshments. The committees include: Entertainment, Mrs. Charles Young, Mrs. Lawrence Newell, Mrs. Fred Duke, Mrs. Robert Morris and Mrs. L. B. Stackhouse; refreshments, Mrs. Albert Roberts, Mrs. Howard Antrobus and Mrs. Lillian Lear.

PREDICT STIRRING EVENTS FOR THE 1939 SENATE

Unusual Scenes in The Usually Staid Chamber Are Being Promised

'RUSH' ROLL CALLS SEEN

By Raymond Wilcox

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—Predictions of stirring events in the 1939 Senate were being freely made today as the date for the convening of the next Legislature drew near.

Unusual scenes in the usually staid chamber are being promised for next year with one of the star attractions listed for the opening day, January 3.

For accompanying the opening of the Senate, there will be a painstaking count made of all Democratic Senators to see whether the entire 26 are present.

The absence of one Democratic Senator at this time will give the Republicans control of the upper house in the event Senator Weldon Hebburn, Delaware, a registered Republican elected as a Democrat, votes with the Republicans.

The Democrats are banking on at least 25 being present and voting with the party. Should Hebburn then vote Republican a 25-25 tie would result, which Lt.-Gov. Thomas Kennedy, a Democrat, would break.

Republican leaders hint, however, of a "deal" which will enable them to organize the Senate.

With the advent of the new Lieutenant Governor, Samuel S. Lewis, on January 17, the Republicans will hold the deciding vote in case of ties. Should Hebburn then vote consistently.

Form Penmanship Clubs At Bensalem Schools

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 5.—The renewed interest in penmanship which has become nation-wide in scope, has been introduced into the Bensalem Township schools with the formation of penmanship clubs.

Very favorable results have been obtained thus far in the different schools and it is believed that individual interest, which became almost non-existent because of the popular notion that big executives are poor writers, is now returning.

A new interest has been created toward good penmanship and a new attitude towards its proper value has been developed.

These objectives are being realized in Bensalem through the special techniques and the formation of the "Good Writers Club" in each school.

Membership is gained by pupil efficiency. It is necessary for the pupil to meet a national standard established by the Palmer Company of New York. A few of the essential requirements include: size, shape, slant and spacing of the letters; the use of ink from grades 4 to 7, and pencil in grades 1 to 3; writing a test copy appropriate for that particular month.

Systematic drill and special training have shown promising results in the Bensalem schools thus far.

Continued interest will be assumed by the use of different techniques, such as various colored penholders. Beginners will receive black penholders. If a beginner remains a member of the Club for two successive months he will receive a red one. The advanced penman will receive a yellow penholder and finally for excellence a blue one will be given. Membership, however, can be lost by not meeting the standards at all times.

March 1st is set as the final date for acceptance of members into the Good Writers Clubs. It is stated that the aim of the Bensalem clubs is to achieve 100 per cent good writers in every class room, and then allow members to write the specimen for the national contest for which winners will receive special awards.

Results in the Bensalem experiment indicate that most of the children are improving. In a third grade with an enrollment of 24, there were 16 pupils that became members in a single month. In another third grade with a total enrollment of 58, there were 21 members in October and 31 in November.

In a fifth grade with an enrollment of 46 there were 8 members of the Good Writers Club in October and in November there was an increase of 22 members. In a sixth grade having a total enrollment of 46 there were nine members in October and in November the membership had doubled.

S. K. Faust, superintendent of Bensalem schools, has heartily endorsed the program and is confident that many more of the students will be members of these Clubs.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Oliver N. Segletes, Pipersville, saw a dark object in one of his fields about a quarter of a mile away. Upon investigation he found the object was two medium sized Black Bears.

When he approached them they got up and sort of galloped away into the woods.

This was at about 10 a. m.

At eleven a. m. he shot a nice doe weighing about 130 pounds.

Many does have been bagged in the section.

Continuing a precedent, which he began last Winter, Supervising Principal J. Leonard Halderman, of the Doylestown schools, today announced that the high school gymnasium will again be utilized for recreational adult evening gymnastic purposes.

The first adult men's gym class will be held this evening from seven to nine o'clock, when Mr. Halderman pointed out that particularly former graduates of Doylestown High School, service clubmen and others who wish to enjoy recreational physical educational sports may attend.

The recreational classes will be under the supervision of eight members of the faculty, two of them in charge each Monday evening.

The classes last year proved highly successful.

Importance of being definite in giving the location of fires when calling for the assistance of the firemen was stressed by Chief Lloyd Y. Crouthamel and 25 other members attending the monthly meeting of the Dublin Fire Company, at Dublin.

Submitting his monthly report, Chief Crouthamel stated that on Saturday, November 19, the firemen had been called to extinguish a chimney fire on a property along the Dublin pike. For some reason the exact place of the fire was not given and the firemen lost a large amount of time before they were able to locate it. Fortunately the flames were extinguished before the firemen arrived at the scene.

It was pointed out at the meeting that persons asking assistance of the firemen should be very specific in giving the location of the fires.

William Krout, veteran president of the Perkasio Fire Company, was re-elected to that post for his twenty-seventh term, at the annual reorganization meeting.

Named in opposition to Mr. Krout at the November meeting of the company was Frank Benner, whose name was also on the ballot, but Mr. Benner withdrew and asked for the unanimous re-election of the incumbent.

Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Alfred Harr; secretary, Paul W. Myers; assistant secretary, J. Paul Harr; financial secretary, Clyde Benner; treasurer, Harry Blitzer; foreman, C. Edward Nungesser, and assistant foremen, Clyde Benner, John Mayes and Woodrow Benner.

Franklin Horn was named trustee, and four fire police were also elected: Frank Benner, Bertram Kirkpatrick, Edward Slotter and Phillip Cressman. The Rev. S. E. Moyer was re-elected.

Municipal Authority Act Valid

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—The municipal authority act, creating a Philadelphia authority to engage in self-liquidating housing projects, was declared valid today by the State Supreme Court in a unanimous decision.

The appellate court made an additional provision that the city must levy a special sewer tax to provide the revenue for financing the city share of the cost.

The opinion, announced by Justice George W. Maxey, asserted that the municipal authorities act of 1935 was constitutional.

Uphold Legality of Wage Tax

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—The State Supreme Court today upheld the legality of the 1½% wage and business profit tax enacted by the Philadelphia City Council to balance the 1939 budget.

Fog Claims Four Lives

Philadelphia, Dec. 5.—Blinding fog which slowed ground traffic and halted air travel last night, took four lives in automobile crashes in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, a check-up showed today.

Weather Bureau officials described the fog as "grade zero"—the densest possible, and reported Philadelphia was the center of a widespread veil extending as far South as Atlanta, Ga., and West to Harrisburg.

Warns Policies Are Dangerous

London, Dec. 5.—Warned by Great Britain that the dictator nations are pursuing dangerous policies, today lay before Germany and Italy.

Earl de La Warr, in the cabinet as president of the Board of Education, told Germany that Britain was strong, and admonished the Reich against repeating the mistakes of 1914.

SPECIAL SERVICE WEEK

YARDLEY, Dec. 5.—The addition to the Yardley Methodist Sunday School was dedicated on Sunday morning, December 4th, with the Rev. Dr. Howard E. Hand, district superintendent, officiating.

The church will celebrate the week with an anniversary program of special service each evening except Saturday, when former pastors and others closely connected with the church have been invited to attend.

The Rev. Cornelius Hudson, Philadelphia, pastor from 1879 to 1881, preached on Sunday evening. During the week the following will speak: Monday, the Rev. Frank M. Scott, Philadelphia, pastor from 1919 to 1921; Tuesday, Dr. Albert M. Witwer, district superintendent, 1931 to 1937; Wednesday, the Rev. B. Warner Shay, Mount Pocono, pastor from 1930 to 1933; Thursday, the Rev. P. W. Hare, Summit Hill, pastor, from 1926 to 1929; and Friday, the anniversary dinner. Music will be furnished by the Rev. and Mrs. Adam Lutzweiler, of their marimba.

On Sunday evening, December 11th, the Rev. William H. Michaels, pastor from 1909 to 1911, will preach.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

The "Crossroads" Again

AS the day for the convening of Congress approaches, the question of what course Mr. Roosevelt will pursue is again "profoundly debated. The debate is more repetition. The same thing has been discussed almost in the same way just ahead of every Congressional session since, in 1934, the direction in which the first New Deal was carrying the country became clear.

UPON at least six such occasions it has been impressively stressed that the President was "at the crossroads"; that he had to make a "choice"; that he could follow farther along the road of expenditures and experimentation or turn toward retrenchment, conciliation and solvency. In view of the fact that upon not one of these occasions when the President had a choice has he chosen to turn right, but always continued left, it would seem more or less absurd to again point out the "choice."

YET, although the answer is always the same, these "pointers out" seem never to abandon hope that the day will come when Mr. Roosevelt, perhaps by mistake, will take the path to the right. Singularly enough, this is being urged upon him now not only by the few conservatives left around him but actually by some of the more realistic New Dealers who, discouraged by the failure of the purge and the results of the election, privately admit that the whole New Deal philosophy is wearing out; that at bottom his is a business country, and that six years is longer than the sob stuff about the "under-privileged third" can be effectively used. In brief, the country is beginning to turn.

Honor Louis Colella On His Sixtieth Anniversary

Louis Colella, 938 Beaver street, was pleasantly surprised Saturday evening when his daughters gave a party in honor of his 60th birthday anniversary. When Mr. Colella returned, he found the guests awaiting his arrival. He was presented with gifts. The living room was decorated in pink and white.

Games and dancing were enjoyed during the evening and refreshments served. About 100 guests were present from Bristol, Tullytown, Trenton, Elizabeth, Roselle Park, N. J., and New York City.

SANTA ACCEPTS BID TO PAY VISIT HERE

Jolly Old Fellow is More Than Glad To Have Been Invited

LETTER IS RECEIVED

Well, Santa Claus is going to come to Bristol.

The Mill Street Business Men's Association today received reply from the jolly old fellow. He stated that he had received the invitation from the business men and would be more than pleased to come here.

The reply from Santa was received today by airmail. It reads: Mill Street Business Men's Association, Bristol, Pa.

Gentlemen:

One hundred reindeer couldn't keep me tied to the North Pole this month. No, siree!

For one thing I have a date in Bristol. That means I am accepting your invitation to visit your fine borough, and again shake hands and talk with all the fine girls and boys there, and meet some that I didn't see last year.

Another reason why I wouldn't for the world stay here at the North Pole this month is because I have work to do in other parts of the world.

You see, Mrs. Santa Claus and I, together with our good helpers, work hard all year 'round. Then when December rolls around, I leave my workshop in charge of my good wife, who supervises the finishing of the many, many toys by the fine workers I have.

I see by your kind invitation that you want me to arrive in Bristol on Wednesday evening next, and I will be there promptly at 7:30 p. m. And I can hardly wait until the time.

With love to all my friends, both young and old, I am,
Yours for a Merry Christmas,
SANTA CLAUS.

St. Ann's Church Wedding Attracts Many On Sunday

A Sunday afternoon wedding took place at three o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church, when Miss Frances Messina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Messina, 915 Spring street, became the bride of Richard DiPrima, son of Mr. and Mrs. John DiPrima, 14 Fourth avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Peter Pincel, rector. As the bridal party entered the church, Miss Frances Tamburella played Lohengrin's Wedding March, and Miss Yolanda DeFelice, Lincoln avenue, sang "The Rosary" and "Ave Maria."

Miss Marion Navetta, Wilson avenue, attended the bride as maid of honor, and Miss Mary DiPrima, Fourth avenue, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. Serving the groom as best man was Anthony Messina, 915 Spring street, brother of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white slipper satin. The form-fitting shirred bodice featured the high neckline, trimmed with seed pearls. The long sleeves were puffed at the shoulders, and the long full skirt had a train five yards in length. The bridal veil of tulle which was the length of her train, had a face veil and was attached to a cap of tulle and trimmed with a crown of pearls. She wore white satin sandals and carried calla lilies.

Miss Navetta was attractive in a gown of rose slipper satin. It was made with square neckline, short puffed sleeves and long full skirt. The neckline was trimmed with small bows of light blue slipper satin. She wore a wreath of artificial flowers in her hair and a blue tulle shoulder length veil. Her sandals were blue, and she carried roses the tone of her gown. Miss DePrima was attired in a gown made like that of the maid of honor, but of light blue slipper satin trimmed with small rose bows at the neckline, a wreath of artificial flowers in her hair, rose tulle shoulder length veil, rose tone sandals. She carried roses.

A reception was held in Asta's Hall, 150 guests attending. The couple left Sunday evening for New York City for a week. The bride travelled in a royal blue velvet dress trimmed with gold lace collar and cuffs, black coat trimmed with fur, and black accessories. Mr. and Mrs. DiPrima will reside at 919 Jefferson avenue.

CAR HITS POLE

When his automobile skidded and struck a pole yesterday morning at 6:30 o'clock, Clarence Lettle, Bridge-water, sustained a contused wound of the right side of the forehead, and a laceration over the left eye. The latter injury required two stitches at Harriman Hospital.

TWENTY-SEVEN HURT AS A HEAVY FOG BLANKETS THE AREA

LARGE BUS OVERTURNS

25 Injured, Five Seriously, In Major Accident On The Roosevelt Boulevard

Heavy fog which blanketed this area during last evening and the night, made driving treacherous, with the result that in some sections traffic was at a stand-still.

Twenty-seven people were injured in two accidents between here and Philadelphia, 25 being hurt when a bus enroute to Miami, Florida, overturned in the heaviest fog experienced in months; while two others were hurt when the machine skidded as brakes were applied, and the car hit an abutment.

The two in the private machine were injured at the fork of the Lincoln Highway at Janney, where one-way traffic begins, the driver being said to have become bewildered in the fog. Seeing that he was nearing an abutment which suddenly loomed from the mist, Elwood Hushion, 4163 Winchester avenue, Atlantic City, N. J., applied his brakes, and the car skidded into the abutment, according to report of Pennsylvania Motor Police.

Hushion was unhurt, but two passengers were injured, one, a young woman of 21 years, remaining in Frankford Hospital for treatment.

Those hurt are: Miss Evelyn Gilbert, 5956 N. 19th street, Philadelphia, lacerations of the scalp, possible fracture of the left cheek-bone, brush burns of the left leg; Abram Zauber, Atlantic City, N. J., brush burns of the head, left hand and both legs. Zauber was discharged after treatment.

The accident was investigated by private Erdman.

Twenty-five passengers were injured, five seriously, early today when a bus enroute to Miami, Fla., from New York City overturned in a heavy fog on Roosevelt Boulevard in the Frankford section of Philadelphia.

The bus driven by Earl Fuller, 32 of Washington, D. C., glanced off a tree after leaving the Highway and landed in a grass plot. Three nearby park guards broke windows in the damaged vehicle and took the injured to Frankford Hospital in commandeered automobiles.

Those injured seriously were: Kate Tischler, 45, New York City; Mrs. Francis Gurnel, 39, Bridgeport, N. Y.; Blanche Mason, 31, St. Petersburg, Fla.; James Johnson, 26, Fairfax, S. C., and John Bailey, 32, Roanoke, Va.

Other victims of the accident were treated for superficial cuts and bruises and discharged, hospital attaches said.

Dinner Served As Resident Here Acts As Hostess

Mrs. Nicholas Sabatini, Wilson avenue, entertained a few friends at her home on Saturday evening. Dinner was served and the decorations for the table were in keeping with the Christmas season. Cards were enjoyed.

Those present were: Mrs. Edward Moffo, Mrs. Angelo Nicol, Mrs. Anthony Russo, Mrs. Joseph Missera, Mrs. John Palumbo, Mrs. Arthur Savard, Mrs. Frank Denny, Mrs. Nicholas Sabatini.

President Roosevelt En Route To Washington

By George Durno

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL, En Route to Columbia, S. C., Dec. 5.—(INS)—President Roosevelt toured the Carolinas by train and motor today on his way back to Washington from Warm Springs. Climaxing his several appearances, the Executive will deliver an internationally-broadcast speech from Chapel Hill, N. C., this afternoon which is expected to re-define America's attitude toward oppression of minorities abroad.

First stop of the day was set for Columbia, S. C., where Governor Olin D. Johnston had breakfast set at the Governor's mansion for a number of South Carolina dignitaries. Six former governors, Senator James F. Byrnes and Governor-Elect Burnet Maybank had accepted, but Senator E. D. "Cotton Ed" Smith, whom the President tried to "purge" in the recent primary, was going to be absent, according to advance reports.

After two hours in the South Carolina capital, the Presidential special was proceeding to Sanford, S. C., where Mr. Roosevelt and his party were due to again disembark and motor approximately 40 miles to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Gov. Hoyer was meeting the Executive at Sanford, and another brief stop was scheduled at Pittsboro to pick up Lt. Gov. W. P. Horton.

RED DRYS OR DRY REDS

You remember when we had prohibitionists all over the premises? Why, of course, you do, unless you are very, very young. And you know all about those Communists who are hiding under beds and in other odd places at this very moment.

But did you ever hear of a Communist Prohibitionist or a Prohibitionist-Communist? Maybe not; but the Bulgarian government has. And the Bulgarian government does not purpose to stand any funny business from such fellows.

So the Bulgarian ministry of the interior has dissolved all temperance organizations in that country. The total membership of these dry outfits is estimated at 50,000; and the Bulgarian government insists that many, if not most, of the members are bold, bad Reds. The Communists, Sofia authorities say, have been using the dry organizations for dissemination of Red propaganda. So out the Red dries or dry Reds must go.

Incidentally, a Sofia dispatch says that Bulgaria, with a population of 6,000,000 consumes annually almost 40,000,000 gallons of wine, 5,280,000 of brandy and 1,850,000 of beer. The number of saloons and restaurants is 20,000—one for every 300 inhabitants, including women and children.

That sheds a little light on this latest anti-Red crusade. No wonder the Bulgarian government wants to send those dries back whence they came.

IS JAPAN GOING NORDIC?

Is Japan going Nordic? One finds such a thing hard to believe. The Mikado is venerated as the Son of Heaven; but there is nothing in Japan's patriotic theology even hinting that the Son of Heaven counts Wotan and Thor among his remote ancestors.

The fact remains, however, that a Berlin dispatch quotes "a reliable source in Vienna" to the effect that "an undisclosed number of Austrian Jewish musicians, engaged to teach at the music conservatory in Kobe, Japan," suddenly discovered that the Japanese government had cancelled their contracts. The dispatch adds that "the disclosure followed by two days the signing at Tokyo of a German-Japanese accord on cultural co-operation on the anniversary of the Japanese-German-Italian anti-Communist pact."

We shall need more authoritative confirmation than Berlin, Vienna or Rome can offer, before we take seriously the notion of a "culturally" Aryan-Nordic Japan. If and when such a hilarious absurdity comes to pass, we shall need a new Gilbert and Sullivan to bring the Mikado up to date.

We hope to be here when the world is taken over by the new generation, of whom 9 out of 10 are marked on their report cards as excellent in Leadership.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol May 10, 1877. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Charles S. Bailey, Esq., assessor for Bristol borough, furnishes us with the result of the annual assessment for the year 1877, as follows: Number of resident tax-payers, 1,274; an increase of 70 over last year; non-resident tax-payers, 70; owners of real estate, 584; tenants, 500; single men, 190. Amount taxable for county purposes, $875,700; increase of amount taxable since last annual assessment, $25,895; amount taxable for state purposes, $124,636; increase since last annual assessment, $48,541; borough tax, $6,522.71; number of watches subject to tax, 45; number of carriages subject to tax, 10.

The Water Company has decided, inasmuch as $250 water rents per year have been secured, to extend their main over into Bath street as far as Linden. They are awaiting to hear the opinion of an engineer before they conclude whether to put the pipe under or over the canal. It is gratifying to know that our citizens on the other side of the canal are to possess the advantages the water works can furnish, without the borough being called upon to pay the cost of making the extensions.

The tenant house of Robert T. Todd, on the turnpike, between Schenck's station and Bristol, took fire last Friday from a pan of hot ashes, which had been placed in the yard. The side of the house and one room was considerably damaged. Mr. Todd saw the smoke from his residence, and arrived in time to aid the tenant in putting out the flames, and saving the house. All this happened, and our firemen never heard a word of it.

It has been decided by the officers of the Bucks County Agricultural Society to hold the next meeting for discussion at Newtown, on Saturday, the 19th instant, two days later than usual. This is on account of the holding of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting on that week, which is attended by many Bucks County people who generally participate in the Agricultural discussions.

They were accompanied by a band which escorted the delegation to Cabene's Hall, where a supper was awaiting them. While this was engaging their attention, the band marched around town serenading the different hotels and making things lively generally.

There will be a meeting in the Hulmeville public school on Saturday, May 26th, at two o'clock p. m., for the purpose of organizing a union of teachers, to give during the summer a grand educational meeting in some central location. The teachers of the townships of Falls, Middletown, Bensalem, Southampton and Northampton, are earnestly invited to attend.

The extensive mills of John and James Dobson, at Falls of Schuylkill have been stopped and some 1400 hands are thrown out of employment. Some time ago the tapestry weavers stopped work on account of a reduction of 10 per cent in their wages. The Messrs. Dobson, understanding that the men at work were assisting the strikers, stopped the mill entirely. Had the proposed reduction been made, it is stated that the wages paid by the Messrs. Dobson would have been higher than paid elsewhere.

On last Saturday night burglars were at work at Newtown. The house of Eli Buckman was entered, and the lower rooms thoroughly searched. Five dollars in pennies, a pair of kid gloves, and some eatables were taken. The office of E. H. Worstell & Son was entered through a window, and a small sum of change abstracted from a desk. An attempt was also made to break open Mrs. S. E. Dolton's store by boring through the front door, but the work was abandoned for some reason before an entrance was effected.

REALIZING this, it has been suggested to the President that the recent election makes it not only easy but certainly wise for him to make concessions to conservative and anti-New Deal sentiment. He could, if he will, nullify much of the criticism against him and restore a good deal of his prestige and position. For example, it is agreed that the people as a whole have become disgusted of the WPA setup. The political saturation of the relief organization and the fact that it was administered by Mr. Roosevelt's personal agent played a considerable part in the New Deal defeats. There will be an irresistible drive to change this system and put relief in the hands of nonpartisan boards or commissions. Instead of trying to block this movement and insisting upon Mr. Hopkins' purity and the virtue of the system, Mr. Roosevelt's friends urge him to take the initiative in the change.

SIMILARLY, it is suggested that rather than wait until amendments to the Wagner Labor Act are forced on him, he himself propose amendments that will remove the great grievances of the employers against the Labor Relations Board and make of it a really impartial tribunal. It is also said that, with great benefit to himself and to the country, he could effect changes in the TVA administration, such as making its yardstick really measure thirty-six inches instead of about twenty-two. He could also profitably remove the public impression that its purpose is to crush private enterprise without regard to law or justice. And, finally, he is urged not to frustrate the efforts of Under Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. John Hanes, to present to Congress, with White House backing, a tax bill that will not inflame business interests generally or further block the road to recovery as did his surplus-profit tax scheme.

THERE is nothing in either the situation or his own words which should make it hard for Mr. Roosevelt to do any of these things. Clearly, it would be common political sense to do them. Certainly, he would be widely commended by many who now do nothing but criticize him. But those who know him best are sure that he will continue left just the same. The reasons are these: First, he is congenitally a crusader whose instincts and desires are toward the left. The Left Wingers are the fellows he personally likes. Second, the most potent appeal that can be made to Mr. Roosevelt is that oft-repeated phrase, "Don't let the people down." Every time his radical friends have used that one—and they do it every time he has a "choice"—the President responds with greater expenditures and more strictures against business. Third, he cannot bear the thought that he must make concessions to business and not business to him. Those who recall the heat of that Madison Square Garden 1936 speech, in which he declared that in his first term the bad business men had "met their match" but in his second term they would "meet their master," can appreciate his repugnance to concessions. Perhaps self-interest may induce him to restrain his desire again to plunge ahead with the "forward-looking men." But the best informed opinion is that this time, as on other occasions, the answer will be the same.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD. — LIGHTS! CAMERA! ACTION!
It's in a drab back room of a New York clinic that glamor-girl Hedy Lamarr goes back to work on her M-G-M picture, "I Take This Woman."

Josef von Sternberg

Only a member of the working press could get on the set today for the re-writing job on the picture and the switch of directors, Frank Borzage replacing Josef von Sternberg, has put the company far behind schedule.

Hedy, Spencer Tracy and a sleepy-looking colored boy are out before the camera.

We people in the background include not only Borzage and his crew but Sidney Guilaroff, M-G-M ace hair stylist, and Gilbert Adrian, the studio's No. 1 designer.

Not much worth reporting in this scene except that Tracy commits one of his rare boners and blows a line.

Another actor would swear Tracy just shakes his head and says: "Sorry, Hedy, let's try it all over again and maybe this time I'll give you a faint idea of what it's all about."

Adrian does a quiet-voiced rave to us about how Hedy inspires him. "She's the kind of person a designer waits for," he says. "A slim, willowy body and an atmosphere of mystery."

Guilaroff contributes an interesting item.

"In one scene in the picture," he says, "we are trying a different coiffure for Miss Lamarr. We are parting her hair in the center and are drawing it back in a soft roll."

Hedy likes her long loose bob, however, and it's going to be her standard hair dress.

"It feels natural," she tells me. "I don't like to be conscious of my hair. And I am if I wear it any different way."

There's no mistaking the easing of tension since Director Borzage took over the picture. Tracy asks me to tell you one thing, though. That he had nothing to do with von Sternberg being removed. He had done only a few days work when the studio decided on the change.

On M-G-M's back lot, they have covered a whole street set with black tarpaulins. The lights are off when we walk in and it's like entering a dark cavern. Joan Crawford, Jimmie Stewart and Lew Ayres are working here in "Ice Follies of 1939." The street is supposed to be Hollywood boulevard and the action takes place in front of a polar palace from which the trio have just been fired.

Assistant directors like Hollywood boulevard sets. You don't have to change the license plates on the cars and the extras can wear the clothes everybody wears in southern California.

Of course, there's really no polar palace on Hollywood boulevard, but this is a matter of dramatic license.

We can watch the scene now. The lights are on and Joan, Jimmie and Lew are standing disconsolately on a corner. Their suitcases are beside them.

Director Reinhold Schunzel (he used to be an actor in Germany and is said to mangle more English than Michael Curtis), lifts his hand.

They are going to rehearse. Jimmie Stewart picks up a suitcase, Joan Crawford a light bag. Lew Ayres reached down for two more suitcases.

He yanks, then almost falls on his face. The suitcases won't budge.

"Hey!" yells Ayres, jumping up, "what's happening here!"

Then the stars and 350 extras let out a roar of laughter. For, during the lunch hour, Joan Crawford, who is very gay these days, has had Ayres' suitcases filled with pigiron.

The courtroom scene at Warners is in "Always Leave Them Laughing." Dick Powell, playing a hero who wears spectacles, is on trial for stealing a song.

But the real defendant in this scene is Maxie Rosenbloom.

All Maxie has to do is jump up in the spectators' section and usher Helen Broderick and Luis Alberni into the front row. He has one line to say: "I saved you a pair of ringside seats."

But, every time, Maxie either forgets to say the line or speaks it at the wrong time.

Finally, he turns to Director Ray Enright. "Say," he blurts out, "how far do you want me to go up the aisle to meet them?"

Enright laughs. "So that's it," he says. "Well, don't worry Maxie. The camera's not on them, it's on you. You're in the whole shot."

MY LOVE IS NEW by IRIS BENNETT

CHAPTER XVII

In the afternoon the boys went into the water again. And again Terry stood on the high dive platform as he directed his miniature army. Constance swam out and back and sat on the sand. Her eyes were troubled, almost desperate, as they glanced at the lean brown figure with a whistle between his teeth. Play fair. That was Terry's motto, his code. Was she being fair? But did she dare be honest? Time. She needed time. "I'd rather be hurt a thousand times than have Terry hurt once. I'll get over it. I'll just have to fight against it a little longer."

After dinner and an hour of play the children went willingly to bed. Twilight dissolved into night and the pines were like a curtain around the camp.

Constance and Terry had left Mike and Donna in their maple-furnished living room and had walked to the river.

"I've been wanting to kiss you all day," Terry said as his arms enclosed her.

"I'm not working for Gordon Keith any more, Terry."

"No?" He would not ask her why she had left. It was enough to know that she no longer spent her days in the study of the Spanish house with him. Had there been a scene? Had Keith overstepped the bounds? Probably so. And Constance had withdrawn as he had known she would.

It was like Terry not to ask questions. "Thank you," she thought, "for not making me lie to you!"

They stayed there for hours, talking, and then walked back through the silent camp to the Flaherty cabin. On the porch Terry kissed her and said, "Good-night, my sweet girl," and left her.

Lying on the living room sofa the tears rolled unchecked down her warm cheeks. Never, she felt, had any girl been faced with the problem of loving two men. Was it the decent thing to clear her troubled conscience and tell Terry? She reached a conclusion about Gordon after a sleepless night and she would not alter it. Forget him, put him out of her heart—if only she could! If only she could!

On Sunday morning when the camp seethed with activity, she felt beaten and broken. She hoped that no one noticed how tired she looked.

As she brushed her hair before Donna's maple dressing table, Donna said, "Please come up often. It's so good to have a girl to talk to. But Terry has talked and raved about you so much I feel that I've always known you. I don't think I've ever seen a man so much in love. And you and he make such a grand couple. Mike's offer is still open if he wants to join us. We won't make any money this year but next year we should. And we like to think that in a few years this will be one of the finest camps for boys in the country."

"I wish Terry would," Constance said. "It's the kind of work he loves. He's happy here."

Donna laughed. "But he said he wanted to marry you first, that he'd waited long enough! I don't blame him!"

She left directly after noonday dinner and Terry walked to the roadster with her.

"Drive carefully and don't pick up any hitch-hikers." And thrust his bronzed head in the car and kissed her warmly. "Keep me close to you, darling, and always remember I'm there. I've liked this place from the first but I'm going to like it a lot better because you've been here. Have I told you this time that I love you?"

"Yes. Last night. And I love you, Terry. Nothing will ever change that." And it was true. "Are you coming home soon?"

"Soon as I can. Drop in and talk to Mother and Dad when you can. And remember me to Rosalind or rather—sorry—to Mrs. Howard. I hope the kid keeps her feet on the ground."

"Good-bye, Terry."

He laughed. "Don't make it sound so final."

A moment later she saw him through the mirror—very tall and brown and dressed in white trousers and a yellow shirt. His gay voice saying, "Don't make it sound so final," twisted her heart. He had no doubts about her. She had left him happy. Terry still had his tomorrow. But what really was she going back to as she drove toward Northwood this warm afternoon? To what tomorrow and with whom?

Wearing blue satin lounging pyjamas, Rosalind lay on the blue chaise longue in her pretty sitting room. On the table beside her was an opened box of candy and on her lap three current fashion magazines. But she was not reading. A mirror framed in silver in her hand, she was regarding her face approvingly.

When Van came in, she put the mirror down quickly. He went to her, held her in his arms, and kissed her.

"This is why I hurry home," he said. "To kiss you and to look at you. No more stopping at the club for a cocktail." Sitting beside her, holding her small childish hand, he helped himself to candy. "Gosh, I'm tired. I've got a kink in my neck. I can't say I liked my job much at first but I'm getting used to it now and I like it fine. After a while you get the feeling there's a lot to learn and you want to learn the whole business. I'll make the people who said I was a disgrace to my family eat the words." He kissed Rosalind's fingers. "Me for a shower, some dinner, and bed. I'm all in."

"Oh, Van, I want to show you my new dress."

"What? Another?"

She went to the closet and brought forth an exquisite creation of white lace.

"Nice," he said, grinning. "I'll bet you look swell in it."

Her eyes were moody. "I bought it to wear to the club tonight, Van."

And insisted sulkily, "I want to go to the Club tonight so that I can wear it."

"Not tonight." He drew her to him. "Come now. Let's not argue about it. I'll take you to the Wednesday night dance. They're always better. Not such a mob."

"But I want to go tonight!" She drew away. "You're always too tired to do anything I want to do! The bank! The bank! That's all you talk about. Do you think I want to stay home on Saturday night with everybody dancing at the Club? I've dreamed all my life of belonging and going to dances there and now when I do belong, you won't take me. You're always tired. I'm sick of hearing you say it. But you're—" her bright dark eyes narrowed—"you weren't too tired to talk to a girl who called you the other night. You talked downstairs but I happened to pick up the phone up here and heard you."

He tried to be patient. "That was Felice. She's been away on a cruise and just got back. She didn't know I was married. Snap out of it, Rosalind."

Flinging the white lace dress on a chair, she cried, "And she called you again last night!"

"What do you do, listen to all the telephone conversations in the house? Is that all you have to do?"

"I heard you!" She said she wanted to go slumming at the Red Slipper and asked you to take her. She doesn't care if you're married. For all I know you've been out with her. How do I know how you spend your days?"

He came to the end of his patience. Going to the door, he held it open, and cried, "The Red Slipper, eh? I ought to know the place pretty well. That's where I picked you up! All this week you've been nagging me about one thing and then another. I'm sick of that! I am tired. I work. That's how I spend my days. I don't give a rap about Felice. But I've known her a long time and I can't help it if she calls me, can I? I have to be polite and kind her along."

"Where are you going?"

"Wouldn't you like to know? Maybe I'm going to the Red Slipper. Maybe I'm going to take Felice slumming. The girls at the Red Slipper were always glad to see me!"

The door slammed after him. The next moment she heard his car drive off. But she would not call him back. She would not run after him and tell him she was sorry. Her pride and her anger would not let her. He'd cool off and come back sorry and take her dancing so that she could wear her new dress.

Since Stephen was out of town and Nina was dining with her sister, Rosalind, changing from the pyjamas into a green chiffon dinner dress, dined alone in the large dining room. Eating little, quarreling with the servant about the food, the meal was finished and she returned to the drawing room to wait. Her anger growing, she paced the rug, pausing several times when she thought she heard a car driving in.

Van was so unreasonable. The bank, his job... She would not be a neglected wife. She wouldn't! Why buy pretty clothes if you couldn't wear them? Why belong to a club when you could not go dancing there on Saturday night? She had counted on it all day. She had imagined how she would look, the compliments she would receive, and the envious glances of the other girls.

When the clock in the hall chimed ten times, she flung it a look of defiance. Perhaps Van wasn't coming back! Perhaps he had gone to the Red Slipper with Felice! And the girls she had known in high school would see him and say he was tired of her and "stepping out" already! He would dance with those girls... Van, dancing with other girls...

Unreasonable jealousy mixed with her anger and disappointment now. And she was frightened. But she would never let anyone know she was frightened, that the thought of his being with another girl made a sharp pain go through her because she loved him so much. Suppose there was a pretty girl at the Red Slipper he had never seen... And suppose he said to the girl the same things he had said to Rosalind the first night he had seen and danced with her... "Where've you been all my life, beautiful?" If he should ever stop loving her and discard her and send her back to Vine Street, she would die.

Not stopping to get a coat, she hurried out to the garage to her own car, a recent gift from Nina, and drove fast to the road house.

"--Get along LITTLE GIFTIE"

Mother used to have one fascinating bureau drawer. In it were numbers of scented tissue-wrapped parcels. Gifts. Not gifts she had selected. Gifts she had received—beribboned, ornate, useless. Mother kept them all year. At Christmas she got them out—and sent them to others. Once in a while the cards got mixed and mother and her friends bowed coldly to each other in great chagrin for some time afterwards.

Nowadays mother's bureau drawer is practically empty. The little doggies that changed hands every Christmas no longer pass along between mother and her cronies.

Advertising pages have given all of them a new view of what's new—wanted—usable in the way of Christmas presents. They report things that are fun to purchase—fun to give—and fun to get. Gifts that stay put—because people really want them. Gifts that actually cost less than the old-fashioned boomerang presents. Why not consult the pages of this publication? See what's new — and wanted — this year by your friends too.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL

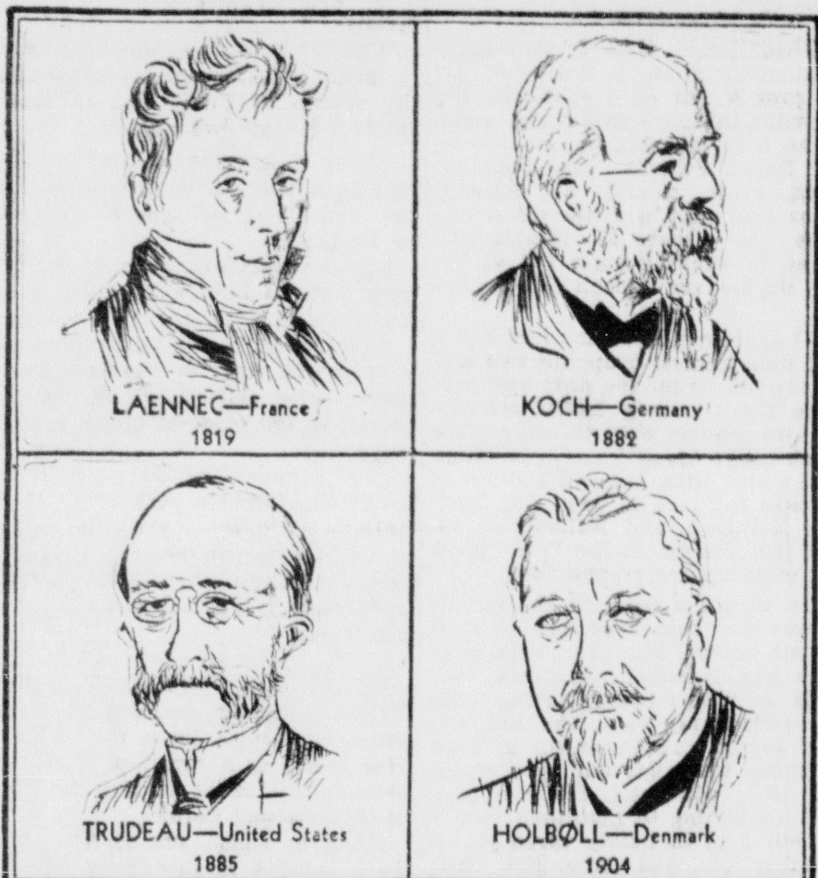

Film detective fans, who pride themselves on solving screen mysteries before the cinema detective, will have one of the toughest jobs of their career when "The Lady in The Morgue," another one of the famous Universal Crime Club mysteries, comes to the Bristol Theatre today.

The audience is completely left in doubt until the end about the identity of the real killer, as it was in "The Black Doll," "The Westland Case" and other Crime Club thrillers, inasmuch as the plot has been woven so carefully as to practically defy solution of the mystery in advance.

In addition to the clever plot manipulation, "The Lady in The Morgue" is packed to the hilt with vivid situations, fast action and sardonic humor.

Preston Foster heads the cast as "Bill Crane," private investigator who always gets his man, but who likes to bedevil the official police. Frank Jenks has the role of "Doc Williams," his wisecracking, rough and ready assistant. Tom Jackson is "Lieut. Strom" and Morgan Wallace is "Inspector Leyman." Beautiful Patricia Ellis has the role of the mysterious, brunette, about whom much of the mystery centers. Others important in

Men From Four Countries Have Been Leaders in Fight Against Tuberculosis

The age-old battle against tuberculosis is half won, medical authorities agree. Four men from four different countries have made valuable contributions toward eradicating this disease. Dr. Rene Laennec (top left), young French physician, invented the stethoscope in 1819. In 1882 great impetus was given to efforts to combat tuberculosis when Dr. Robert Koch (top right), a German, discovered that the disease was caused by the tubercle bacillus. In 1885, Dr. Edward L. Trudeau

(lower left) opened the first permanent sanatorium at Saranac Lake, N. Y. Christmas Seals as a means of raising money to conduct programs in the diagnosis, prevention and cure of tuberculosis were first sold in Denmark in 1904 by Einar Holbøll (lower right), Copenhagen postal clerk. The first Christmas Seal sold in the United States was in 1907, when 179 out of every 100,000 people were dying from tuberculosis. Today, 65.7 out of every 100,000 living die from this disease.

the cast are Joseph Downing, Al Hill, James Robbins, Stanley Price, Gordon Hart, Roland Drew, Byron Foulger, Minerva Urecal and Gordon Elliott.

The picture tells of the theft of the body of a beautiful girl from the morgue before it can be identified. "Bill Crane" seeks it because he fears that it may be that of a missing heir. Rival gangsters want the body because they believe it is that of the wife of one of them. Wild scenes of adventure take place before the body is recovered. Even after this is done, the case still seems far from solution until Crane suddenly gathers all the principals together and builds up a fool proof case against the guilty party.

tre, her pictures have been a delight and a revelation.

"That Certain Age" is as different from the previous trio as each of them were from each other. As Deanna grows older, her stories are carefully tailored to her age.

This picture is lighter in theme than the others, but no less powerful in entertainment content.

Starring Deanna, with Melvyn Douglas, Irene Rich, Jackie Cooper, John Halliday, Juanita Quigley, Jackie Searl, Peggy Stewart, Nancy Carroll and Charles Coleman. "That Certain Age" tells the story of a young girl, nearing sixteen, who meets a war correspondent and fancies herself violently in love with him. Temporarily infatuated with him, she forgets her younger "boy-friend" and her childish playmates until it is brought home to her that she is still a child, and that romantic love has no place in her life.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Hanging on the wall of the wardrobe department in the Warner Bros. studio is a big chart which never fails to impress women visiting the place for the first time. The chart lists all the Technicolor pictures the studio has made and the actresses appearing in them. Following the name of the star is a brief description of her coloring and after that a list of the shades that have proven the most flattering to her. Although intended as a guide for the designers in the plotting of future Technicolor wardrobes it provides interesting color advice to every woman, for the coloring of the stars runs the gamut from Gloria Dickson's almost transparent white skin to Gale Page's flashing brunette colors.

After the name of Gloria Dickson, who makes her color debut in "Heart of the North," is listed silver blonde hair, blue-grey eyes and very fair skin. All greyed shades are becoming to her. Claire Trevor, photographed in color for "Valley of the Giants," is a golden blonde with green eyes and light skin. Most flattering to her are yellow, wine and all shades of green.

Ann Sheridan, who has worked in Technicolor shorts, is a red head with hazel eyes and medium complexion. She is at her best in spice shades, Nile green and banana.

Rosella Towne, who worked in the colored short, "Declaration of Independence," has auburn hair, violet eyes and creamy skin. Her gems of color are delphinium, rust and fuchsia.

Beverly Roberts, remembered in "God's Country and the Woman," has light brown hair, grey eyes and a peachy skin. Apple green, poudre blue, electric blue and grey emphasized her luscious coloring.

Olivia de Havilland, heaven's gift to Technicolor, has medium brown hair and eyes but her skin is light in color. Black, chartreuse, coral and turquoise were the shades most admired on her in "Adventures of Robin Hood." Margaret Lindsay was loveliest in "Gold Is Where You Find It" when she wore vermilion, white, mustard or emerald. Her own coloring consists of medium brown hair, dark brown eyes and deeply tanned skin.

Gale Page, whose hair is almost black and whose eyes are a very deep brown, also keeps her skin tanned all year 'round. In "Heart of the North" she is most attractive in her mixed tweeds, heather, burgundy and fawn shades.

HIBERNIANS TO GO AFTER THIRD STRAIGHT WIN

BRISTOL BASKETBALL
Schedule For Tonight
HIBERNIANS-ST. ANN'S
CELTICS-GRUNDY'S

Gene Dugan's Hibernians quintet will go after its third straight win of the Bristol Basketball League tonight when it meets the St. Ann's A. A. five in the first game scheduled on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. In the second tilt, the Celtics will meet the Grundy team.

The Hibos astonished the basketball fans last Thursday night when they trimmed the Celtics, despite the fact that during the last four minutes of the game they had but four players remaining on the floor, the others being eliminated by personal fouls.

However, the Corson street boys are encountering stiff opposition from the Purple and Gold, who have just as strong a reserve team as its starting five. The team is being led by Johnny Slaven, formerly of Bloomsbury State Teachers College, and Ray Watkins, New York University. These, along with the colored flash, Ray Dorsey, and Pete Bornice and Pete DeLuca, round out the first quintet.

The Hibos will use the following in the starting lineup: Joe Roe, Eddie Dugan, Joe Snyder, Nick Hufnell and Joe Gallagher.

The Celts-Grundy team should be interesting, as neither have tasted the joy of victory. Grundy's almost upset the works last week by battling the Goodwill team toe to toe until the final five minutes. The Celtics have hit a streak of bad luck and just haven't hit their stride. A close game is predicted here.

The largest crowd of the season is expected to be on hand when Referee Henry Morgan makes the first toss-up at eight o'clock sharp.

At Big Ten Coaches' Meeting

Lynn Waldorf and Francis Schmidt

MORRISVILLE ELEVEN WINS SCORING HONORS

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 5—Averaging approximately three touchdowns per game over a ten card schedule, the Morrisville Bulldogs grid team again won the team scoring honors among Lower Bucks Schools. The Hoffman-coached crew wound up another glorious campaign with the same record as the great '37 combination achieved in winning eight out of ten games during the season just completed.

The Langhorne Redskins annexed 5 out of nine games, dropping two and tying two others for the next best percentage mark among LBCL schools. These two schools were the only clubs to finish above the 500 mark, although Bristol ended with five and five out of ten games for just an even 500. Bensalem, Newtown and Fallsington all closed the seasons in the "red" in so far as victories were concerned.

There wasn't a team in the circuit that was not held scoreless at least once this season. However, both Morrisville and Bensalem held the best records in this respect, having been whitewashed only once, the Bulldogs in ten games and Bensalem in nine. Morrisville was shut out by Trenton High, 13-0, while Mr. Holly applied the whitewashing to Bensalem (which was their first in nearly three years) when they wallowed them, 31-0, early in the season.

Bristol was held scoreless twice, losing their two opening games via that route to Collingdale, 14-0, and Bordentown, 12-0, respectively. Langhorne and Newtown were held scoreless three times, but in one instance the Redskins held the opposition scoreless also and thus averted another shutout setback. Langhorne was beaten by Bristol 20-0; and Morrisville, 26-0, shut out scores while Fallsington held them to a scoreless tie. Newtown received goose eggs against Riverside, 13-0, in the season's opener, and later by Bristol, 42-0; and Langhorne, 6-0.

Fallsington received the longest string of zeroes for their work, having been held scoreless in 4 of their 8 games, all of which came in a row, but two of which they held the opposition without a score. Hence they were shut out on only two occasions this season, by Morrisville, 20-0; and Langhorne, 7-0. They fought Pemberton and Langhorne to 0-0 ties.

In applying the coat of whitewash to the opposition, the Langhorne Redskins excelled in this department, having shut out their rivals on all five occasions in which they emerged the victors. They won their first four tilts via this method in downing Pemberton, 6-0; N. J. S. D., 25-0; Fallsington, 7-0; and Trenton High's Reserves, 19-0. Their final shut-out game was handed to Newtown, 6-0; and they also fought Fallsington to a scoreless deadlock once.

Morrisville was next best with four such applications, beating Burlington, 12-0; Fallsington, 20-0; Trenton Catholic, 34-0; and Langhorne, 26-0. Bristol shut out the opposition three times while Bensalem, Fallsington, and Newtown scored one such victory. In fact, Fallsington's lone victory of the season was a shutout of their Alumni, 7-0. Bensalem's shutout victim was their Alumni, 13-0, while Newtown whitewashed Flemington, 20-0. Bristol's opponents who failed to cross the Cardinals' goal line were Langhorne, 20-0; Burlington, 6-0; and Newtown, 42-0. Trenton Catholic did not score a touchdown but counted a field goal.

The Newtown Indians absorbed the worst shelling of any Lower Bucks school when a conference foe, Bristol, wallowed them, 42-0. The Bulldogs scored decisive wins over Trenton Catholic, 34-0; and N. J. S. D., 38-6; while Bensalem trounced Pemberton High, 34-8, in dishing out its one sided win to an opponent. Langhorne's most top-sided win was scored over N. J. S. D., 25-0, with Flemington being the victim of the Newtown Indians worst flogging by dropping a 20-0 decision to them. Fallsington did not score an easy win all season. In fact, their lone win over the Alumni, 7-0, was very close.

Fascist Organ Makes Charges Against France

arations for invasion of Tripolitania, the paper stated.

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Dec. 5—(INS)—A "real crisis by Spring," possibly leading to war, must come out of French-Italian differences over Mediterranean lands, a high source in close touch with the French official attitude said today.

With Rome-Paris relations at their most precarious state since the Ethiopian War as a result of anti-Italian demonstrations of loyalty to France in Tunisia and Corsica, all French quarters made it clear this country would fight for her outlying possessions.

"The next great war crisis will come in the Mediterranean," said a high authority.

"The Italian Chamber of Deputies incident (when members shouted for the return of Tunis and Corsica to Italy) was the first signal.

"After violent French reaction, there may be a brief period of quiet, but not for long. There will be a real crisis by Spring."

Senator Joseph Caillaux, former premier and an influential elder statesman, said in a speech:

"Foreigners must understand that France will fight to the last man to protect the empire which we have carved at the price of blood, men and money."

"The language of Italy would have been considerably different if the Italians could have known the outcome of the attempted general strike," he said, referring to the refusal of French workers to join a Leftist walk-out call last week.

PARIS, Dec. 5—(INS)—French and Italian relations reached their most precarious state since the Ethiopian War today as a result of anti-Italian demonstrations of loyalty to France in Tunisia and Corsica.

Riots in which 200 to 300 persons were injured in the areas which an informal campaign in Italy is demanding should be ceded by France followed representations in Rome by Andre Francois-Poncet, the new French ambassador.

Straining of Rome-Paris relations came on the eve of signing of a French-German treaty of friendship, for which foreign minister Joachim Ribbentrop is coming to Paris tomorrow.

Italy, it was believed today, may be angered by the fact that the demonstrations were given official support through Cesar Campinchi, minister of the navy. Corsican-born, Campinchi sent this message to his fellow-citizens of Napoleon's island:

"I am in full agreement with all of you in your sentiments."

Throughout the night the Italian Consulate at Ajaccio, chief city of Corsica, was guarded by French police. All troops were confined to their barracks, ready for any possible emergency.

Thirty-five thousand persons demonstrated at Ajaccio, shouting "Down with Mussolini! Down with Italy!" and pledging: "We live French and we die French!"

(Dispatches to London newspapers said after a protest meeting against Italy's demands, demonstrators in Ajaccio marched to the Italian consulate, broke police lines, smashed windows and otherwise badly damaged the consulate.)

In another Corsican town, some 25,000 demonstrated before the Italian consulate. Then they marched down to the waterfront and tried to seize a small Italian steamer lying at anchor. When the captain raised the French flag, however, he was cheered and the crowd dispersed.

Anger over the territorial ambitions also flared in Tunisia, although the non-native population there is predominantly Italian. The Italian consulate in Tunis was damaged badly by stones thrown by a throng of 20,000. Windows were broken and a heavy door was wrecked.

Thousands Back To Work In France

PARIS, Dec. 5—As "reorganization week" for French industries got under way today, thousands of workers who had been on strike or locked out, began to return to work.

At Le Havre, however, nine ships remained tied up, including the giant liner Normandie, the Ile de France and De Grasse. Officials of the General Confederation of Labor, defeated in their general strike attempt last week, met to decide their next move.

Members of the Normandie's crew today received letters notifying them that they were discharged for failing to obey orders requisitioning the liner, on behalf of the government.

Anne Lindbergh To Live In Germany

New York, Dec. 5—Anne Morrow Lindbergh is going to live in Germany. She is going because she believes in her husband.

This is the explanation offered by those who know Anne Lindbergh well, whenever they are asked today — as they frequently are — "What does Anne think about going to Germany?" To them it is no surprise that Mrs. Lindbergh should follow wherever her husband leads.

The decision to spend this winter in Berlin undoubtedly was Colonel Lindbergh's, according to friends.

James Plunges Into Conferences

Plymouth, Pa., Dec. 5—Governor-Elect Arthur H. James, the picture of health after a vacation in Texas, Louisiana and Mexico, today plunged into post-election conferences with Republican party chieftains in an attempt to thresh out details of the incoming G. O. P. administration.

Judge James was scheduled to confer today with Philadelphia party leaders, incoming State Chairman James Torrance and Philadelphia City Solicitor Jay Cooke. The Governor-Elect planned to spend two days in Philadelphia.

Pope Celebrates Mass

Vatican City, Dec. 5—Pope Pius celebrated mass today and he is "well," it was stated at the Vatican. He drove through the Vatican gardens for an hour, Sunday, marking the first time he has been out since his recent attack of cardiac asthma.

57,000 Killed in Five Months

Tokyo, Dec. 5—Fifty-seven thousand Chinese troops and guerilla soldiers have been killed and more than 5,000 taken prisoners in the five months' clean-up campaign just concluded in Northern China, it was announced today.

Masaryk To Resign

London, Dec. 5—Jan Masaryk, Czech minister to London, and son of the Republic's first president, will resign on January 1st, it was announced today.

He will make his home in London, and does not intend to return to Prague.

Sally Won't Sing Again

New York, Dec. 5—Sally Clark McLanahan, sister-in-law of John Roosevelt and wife of George X. McLanahan, of New York, is "never" going to sing again.

In the first place the 18 year old society bride of three days is going to be entirely too busy apartment hunting.

In the second place she insisted today she never could sing any way, because her voice is so whispy it wouldn't carry across a kitchenette without a microphone.

All of which typed Sally as a home-loving housewife, as she and her husband sped across the country toward San Francisco and a honeymoon in Honolulu.

Predict Stirring Events For The 1939 Senate

Republican the G. O. P. would be able with full membership present to out-vote the Democrats.

Senate parliamentarians expect that there will be "rush" roll calls when either side catches the other napping and considers the occasion advantageous. With the lineup so close the absence from the chamber of one or two Senators from either side would be sufficient to change, if only temporarily, voting control in the Senate.

Adding to the Democrats' troubles is the reported dissatisfaction of Senator Anthony Cavalcante, insurgent Fayette county Democrat, over the Democratic leadership. Cavalcante, it is reported,
